WEDNESDAY MATINEE IS RACING HISTORY FOR LOCAL TRACK

Wednesday's Races... BEST AND MOST SPECTACULAR HEATS EVER RUN ON JANSVILLE TRACKS ARE HAD YESTERDAY.

7,000 WITNESS CARD

Attendance Breaks Records of Three Years of Fair—Colleen Cops In Thousand Dollar Race.

Racing history was made at the Jansville Park association track yesterday—the first day's matinee of the fair. The greatest races in the annals of the famous Jansville City tracks even overshadowing those of the palm days of years ago when Jansville was the mecca for horsemen of the entire country were run. Seven thousand people saw the matinee.

Monroe Horse Wins 2:06.
Colleen, owned by F. B. Luchinger, the Monroe horseman, took first money in the big race on the card, the 2:06 pace, for a thousand dollar purse. The 2:30 trot went to Dr. Thornberry, owned by Dr. S. A. Diller of Sparta. Winn Dillon took the 2:25 pace in a race which was the most sensational seen on a track in the northwest in years. Miss Peter Gilbert, a Canadian horse from Millerton, Ont., and owned by W. H. Grosch, had matters easy in the three-year-old trot, taking the first two heats. The best time was 2:06 1/2. Five heats were necessary to decide the sensational 2:30 pace, on the half-mile track. In this race that Toddy Cochato, John Soulmans' black mare, fell dead directly under the wire in the second heat. The Cochato had placed in the lead in the opening heat. It was ahead in the second until a hundred feet from the judge's stand, when it tottered and wobbled to the line, crashed in a heap and died. Dr. Thornberry took the next two heats and lost the fourth to Nick La Conda. Thornberry placing fourth. The Sparta horse was still in the running and moved away from the field and topped the fifth. The best time was 2:18 1/2, made by Toddy Cochato in the initial heat.

Run Six Heats.
A sixth heat to break the tie was necessary in the thousand dollar race, the 2:06 pace, on the mile track. This was the most exciting race of the day with nose and nose inches, spurts in the last eighth and finally the winning out of Colleen featured. The first heat saw Lan Mac, choice of many, beat the Colleen under the wire by inches. In the second heat Lan Mac was again a promising winner until the last hundred yards when in a spurt Colleen was first under the wire. Colleen broke her pole in the third heat in the lead and gave a terrible lashing. Adio Guy beat her out. Colleen won the fourth heat by a nose with Adio Guy striving hard for the wire. The final heat was won by Colleen by a good margin. Only Margaret Hal Dan Mac Adio Guy and Colleen ran the fourth heat.

Winn Dillon a Winner.
Winn Dillon took first money in the 2:25 pace run on the mile track, purse $500. Dr. Gano, another choice of those supposed to be in the "know," was the favorite, although many were picking Wood Patch for the honors. The Patch finished best in the fourth heat, second. Winn Dillon lost to Dr. Gano in the first heat, finishing third. The next three heats were first for the Edgerton horse. It is the property of F. Westlake.

Race fans watched with interest the work of Joe Heald in the 2:25. Joe, an old favorite with horse followers, drove but three heats.

The summary:

MORRIS MILLER

The old adage, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," has been exemplified in many walks of life. The same holds true in the case of the different branches of the government's service, and evidently, looking from the plans outlined by Uncle Sam, he isn't going to let his sailors and soldiers loose into "dull boys" for want of beautiful play. Indeed, the enlisted men are to be provided with plenty of athletic and recreation while in service. A committee in charge of this work has already been organized and plans are being formulated to serve this end. Sports of all sorts are to be pursued for the government officials believe that athletes are a valuable asset in the building of a great army.

In the past the United States has seldom supreme at the various Olympic meets and the same principles that enable American athletes to carry off honors on track and field are to be employed in a martial test. The plan to establish sports at the various training camps where the new American army is to be trained has been sanctioned by the war and navy departments for the simple reason that they are convinced that the sort of beneficial exercise will fit their men better morally and physically.

First Baseman Walter Holke, of the Giants is not leading the league in his batting average, but it is noted that when he gets them. It was his triple in the ninth on August 1 that scored two runs and broke up the game in Pittsburgh. The story of the game says "Holke weakened in the ninth." But that's only an alibi for Holke's smashing hit.

COBB SHOWS YANK

SPECTACULAR PLAY

Whether Ty Cobb is losing his title as king of baseball players isn't entirely demonstrated by his tremendous batting average for the season. On a recent visit to New York, Cobb besides doing most of the baseball hammering pulled a play or two that by sheer audacity simply stunned Yankees and spectators alike.

Ty had driven out a home run and then had singled. He went to second base, and when Veatch reached first base the two of them worked a double steal, leaving Cobb on third and Veatch on second.

On a ball hit to the infield by Burns, Cobb sprinted for the plate and Veatch for third. Cobb saw he couldn't make it easily, but he was determined to try. He took a few steps back to third, only to find that Veatch was there also.

Walters completely lost his head and, dashing to third, he tagged both runners, putting Veatch out. Then he saw Burns wildly footing it for second, and forgetting the plate was unoccupied, whipped the ball to second to get Burns. That was Cobb's cue. Like a flash he was up and off. He was within ten feet of the plate before Walters knew what was going on, and scored with no trouble.

Crawford Slows Up.
Sam Crawford, the Detroit veteran, did not make the last trip east. Hugh Jennings has decided to keep him out of the game for all time, reserving him only for pinch hitting duty.

Connie Mack recently declared that Cruise and Hornsby of the Cardinals are the finest looking young players in baseball. He predicted that Hornsby eventually would attain the same degree of excellence voted Jack Barry.

Dave Robertson is back as regular in the Giant outfield, in spite of the good start made by Joe Wilhoit, who was sent in to fill Robertson's place.

Chuck Workman of the Cubs seems doomed for the minors, or else mere utility infielding duty for the Cubs. His fielding, of the nastiest sensational sort, may hold him in the majors, but his hitting is too woefully weak to be considered. Pete Kilduff, recently obtained from the Giants, is a far better hitter, and excellent fielder and base runner.

Just what Christy Mathewson wants of another outfielder is not clear, but nevertheless he took Shorwood Magee from the Braves on waivers. Mattie always has had a high opinion of Magee and believes that the reason for his poor showing with the Braves was that he could not get along with George Stallings. Magee, because of his length of service, could have claimed his freedom, but no major league club claimed him.

The fact that the Robins now are playing the kind of ball that won a pennant last year strengthens the belief that several members of the team were inclined to sulk during the early stages of the National league race this year.

SOULMAN'S HORSE DIES OF STRAIN, IN 2ND HEAT, 2:30

Toddy Cochato Dies Under Wire After Wobbling Hundred Feet After Leading Field All the Way.

Sensations came thick and fast at the big racing matinee at the fair yesterday, but the most startling and no doubt most regrettable one was the death of Toddy Cochato, John Soulmans' horse. The Cochato dropped dead directly under the wire in the second heat of the 2:30 trot.

The horse showed up as a surprise in the first heat and won in 2:18 1/2, fast time. She was leading in the second heat by a full length until about a hundred feet from the judge's stand. Suddenly she broke, and a gasp went up from the seven thousand in the stands as Dr. Thornberry, close behind, moved rapidly to the lead.

The Cochato wobbled badly but kept on. Ten feet from the wire she gave a low leap in the air and plunged forward. Horsemen knew the trouble. The sulky bounced high in the air and shot George Spender, the driver, high and a quarter the width of track away. He clung to the reins, but that was unnecessary. Cochato was breathing her last.

Fit for the sale market, after months of the best training and equal to a price of four figures yesterday, today the horse will most likely be worth about twelve to fifteen dollars to the soap factory owner.

Some horsemen claimed over exertion the cause of the sudden death of the animal.

CLOSE FOND DU LAC SALOONS ON SUNDAY

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Fond du Lac, Wis., Aug. 16.—All saloons of Fond du Lac must be closed on the Sabbath until the state legislature either repeals or enforces the Sunday closing law. This is the pronouncement of the chief of police and district attorney, who say that while there will be no prosecutions of the saloon men who opened their buffets last Sunday, that the "lid" will remain on tight on Sundays hereafter.

The saloon keepers have agreed to abide by the ruling and the citizens' committee is also content.

EVERY 29TH PERSON AUTOMOBILE OWNER

Washington, Aug. 16.—With one automobile for every eleven persons in the state, Iowa led the country in 1916 in the number of motor cars per capita, according to official figures in the government office of motor vehicles. California was second with one car for every twelve inhabitants.

Nebraska and South Dakota had one for every thirteen. Arkansas stood last in the list of states with only one car for every 116 inhabitants.

The national average was one for every twenty-nine. By sections the south had relatively the fewest cars in proportion to population.

INSTALLATION OF NEW "V" BOILER COMPLETED

Hot water at the Y. M. C. A. can now be had again, the new boiler having been installed today. A fire will be started in it tonight and those who are not used to cold showers will be accommodated with hot one.

The reason for the great delay in installing a new boiler is due to the fact that after the first boiler had been installed, a leak was found in it, and it had to be taken out and shipped back to the factory and another sent to replace it.

ATTRACT LARGE CROWD

Showings in Charge of Women Are of Exceptional Merit This Year—Defense Booth Popular.
(By Mrs. Abbie Helms.)

A "Perfect Day" was staged Wednesday at the fair grounds, both in the exhibits shown and attendance. The exhibits shown were of high quality culinary specimens and in flowers were brought in such profusion in the early morning hours that the attendants at the several booths were nearly distracted in providing accommodations for them.

Fine Arts Display.
Many family parties from the country were in evidence and large crowds were seen in all the buildings. The judges in the art and needlework department began work early and will have a busy time for a couple of days.
from all appearances. She is Miss Anne L. B. Cheney, who is an artist with a studio in the Auditorium Tower, Chicago. She is an expert in arts and crafts and well qualified for the arduous task before her. It is by far the largest display of pictures ever hung on the walls of the building, and they are for the most part of very high order of merit. A case of beautiful china is shown, as the work of the evening class of the continuation school.

A splendid exhibit in the floral display for amateurs is shown. These are especially fine in gladiolus, sweet peas, asters, verbena and some other lines. The dahlias are just beginning to open and Mr. Thibault has some of his prize favorites on hand to show what they will be when in their glory a month from now. Some lovely designs, wreaths, etc., are shown in the professional class as well as beautiful specimens of ferns, palms, etc. A delightful work on the blossoms attracted much admiration.

Appetizing Cooking.
There is a most appetizing display of culinary dainties from the domestic science pupils of the high school.
Miss Carrie Mae Huginin is judge of this department, as well as that of the domestic science work of the high schools. A varied collection of book racks, shelves, pedestals, etc., is shown as the work of the vocational schools. C. J. Anderson is doing the judging in this department.

The entries from the rural schools are in great numbers and variety.
Earl Cooper and R. T. Harris are doing the judging in these classes, as well as in the vegetable and farm products. Surprisingly good specimens are shown in the vegetables brought in from the children's gardens, and competition in some classes will be close.

The check room in the space under the grand stand is in charge of Miss Pearl Harless, and a great attention is being given to the proving to be of real worth, especially to mothers with little folks to care for. It was crowded with tired people all day, and many a busy mother found information as well as a haven of rest.

Defense Booth Attraction.
The county defense booth was presented over by Miss Elizabeth Fulton and Mrs. A. C. Anderson, president of the organization, was the guest of honor. Mrs. Roseworth, Mrs.
Grant and Miss Sara Richardson were in charge of the booth. The exhibit is a most interesting one, as a great deal of interest shown in the work and many inquiries are made in regard to it. They have Red Cross badges for sale and are taking meaningful contributions for the good of the cause.

Mrs. O. C. Colony of Evansville, president of the district federation of women's clubs, is in attendance at the fair. Mrs. W. E. Sowle, Mrs. Chas.
Hill, Miss Marion Hill, Mrs. Gates and Miss Parker, backman of the Milton Junction, were at the fair yesterday.

Inspect School Exhibits.
Many teachers looked over the educational exhibit yesterday, among them being Miss Emma Paulson of Clinton, a former instructor in the local high school. Others interested in the rural school exhibits were Miss Stella Attery and Miss Josephine Barrett of Edgerton, and Miss Nettie and Miss Anna Armit of Port Atkinson. Men from Nebraska and from Mississippi were looking over the exhibit, and the shows that the fair of the Rock county fair is spreading far and wide.

SHE DIDN'T KNOW SHE LOST FINGER

Portion of Digit Severed When Woman's Hand, on Auto Door, Is Struck By Tongue of Dray.

Miss Iva Ivasdahl of Chilton, South Dakota, in Janesville to attend the fair with relatives she is visiting at Cambridge, had a finger cut off yesterday as she was driving a dray. The finger was severed by the tongue of the drayman, but she didn't know it for five minutes.

She was sitting in the rear seat of the automobile, her right hand clasped the upper edge of the body, fingers of her left hand were on the door. The drayman, a big fellow, turned from river to Pleasant street, a dray started from the curb. The tongue hit Miss Ivasdahl's third finger and cut it off clean about the center of the second joint.

She saw the blood, but did not examine the injured member until some time after. When she did, she discovered a portion of her digit was gone.
Miss Ivasdahl was taken to the office of Dr. W. E. Edden for attention. The physician advised her to inform the police of the accident. She did, but little information useful to the finding of the drayman was possible, and members of the party even disagreed
as to the place where the drayman hit her machine. All felt the injury, but did not know that Miss Ivas-dahl was injured.

START RECRUITING FOR AIR SERVICE

Big Campaign For Men For This Service to be Launched Soon—
George S. Parker in Charge
Here.

Recruiting for the aviation service will be launched in a large way within the near future, according to advice received today by George S.
Parker, branch chairman of the Military Training Camps association. In this service it is likely that many of the younger men who applied for admission to the second officers' training camp but were rejected, may find a place. Aviation officers in particular must be young, must possess qualities of high character and must be as near as possible perfect physical condition. They must be mentally alert and must have a good general education, preferably along mechanical lines. Men with athletic experience and instinct will be given preference.
The campaign will be started in the near future, and will be handled in this city by Mr. Parker.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Mary McCue.
The funeral of Mrs. Mary McCue, one of the city's pioneers, was held this morning. The services were held at the St. Patrick's church, with Pa-ther Eugene E. Reilly conducting the mass. Interment was in Mt. Olivet cemetery. The pallbearers were John McCue, Edward McCue, Michael Mc-Cue, Edward McCue, Timothy McCue
and John McKewan.

Between seven and eight thousand people had passed through the gate of the Janesville fair at a little after noon today, and it was expected that the day's crowd would nearly equal that of yesterday. Janesville Day, always the biggest day of the week, this was Milk Producers' Day, and from every section of the county dairy farmers came with their families and herds to take advantage of the program which had been arranged by the fair directors in collaboration with the officers of the local milk producers' association. The morning was devoted especially to the dairy men.
Prominent milk dealers from Chicago were present to deliver addresses, and Hugus Van Pelt, editor of Kimball's Dairy Farmer, a daily cow demonstration on a platform before the grandstand that interested all farmers and consumers alike. W. J. Kittle, secretary of the Chicago Producers', addressed the assembly, and W. E. Skinner spoke on the food value of milk and dairy products.

Throughout the day the Kee &
Chas. Knipachield, by special arrangement with the local producers, gave away ten thousand glasses of milk. A tent had been erected in front of the secretary's office, and little information useful to the finding of the drayman was possible, and members of the party even disagreed
as to the place where the drayman hit
her machine. All felt the injury, but did not know that Miss Ivas-
dahl was injured.

Livestock Judging Progresses.
Judging of the livestock progressed today with even greater speed than heretofore, and Rock county, as ever, came out well to the fore. John E.
Kennedy, a big fellow, turned from river to Pleasant street, a dray started
from the curb. The tongue hit Miss Ivasdahl's third finger and cut it off clean about the center of the second joint.

The afternoon's racing program was launched before approximately as large a crowd as that of yesterday.
The directors, claiming to be having the "Lexington of the North" here was well substantiated in yesterday's races, and hundreds of people were drawn by this one attraction.

A well policed grounds has cut danger of accident to a minimum, and there have been no serious mishaps to mar the week's program. Speed here are stations at all classifications of streets and at crowded points to keep the people moving in an orderly fashion.

Tomorrow, the last day of the fair, will be marked by another fine racing card, when a fine field of horses will compete for the thousand dollar purse in the 2:10 pace. Another race which is sure to be a big attraction will be for five hundred dollar stake, and the 2:24 trot, for a similar purse, is also expected to be a whirlwind.

Awarding of prizes in the milk contest and continued judging will be the order of the morning. Concerts by the Bower City Band and a fine program of free attractions make up the rest of the day's program.

A Little Business Man

A little shaver came to the bank the other day to start a savings account.

A wise grandmother came with him.

She stood aside and let the boy do the business for himself.

He was too small to write on the desk. He got down upon his knees beside a chair and wrote his name and address for our records.

After he had made his first deposit and we gave him his bank book, they started home, but at the door the boy turned to take another look at HIS bank before he went out.

It was a big day for him.
We'll be glad when he comes again. He has made a fine start. Today he is a little business man but soon he will be a big business man—and have a handsome bank account.

What about your boy? We'll be glad to see him too. The children are always welcome
here.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Mohart Van Sant Bosworth, who played recently in "Joan the Woman," "Freckles" and "What Money Can't Buy," was born in Marietta, Ohio, in 1887. Like the most of the older stars he began his career on the stage. In the year 1885 he started with the then famous Daly company. He remained with this company for ten years.

After leaving stock he was leading man with such favorites as Julia Marlowe, Henrietta Crosman, Amelia Bingham and Mrs. Fiske. Then he again entered stock, this time as a director at the Belasco theater in Los Angeles.

In 1909 he left the stage for good and started to act for the camera. He appeared in "The Power of the Sultana," which was the first picture to be made at Los Angeles.

Mr. Bosworth is six feet tall and weighs 205 pounds. He has blond hair and blue eyes and does not look one bit like the villainous character he played in "What Money Can't Buy."

Like most of the actors of the '90s, Mr. Bosworth boxes and fences. In stock in those days almost every play had at least one duel in it. He rides and swims also.

It is possible to accuse the screen, at least for the time being, of every one in the world must be.

Mohart Bosworth is a big actor and has played the biggest character parts in some of the greatest picture plays. It is such actors as who are going to make screen plays lasting.

There is a Mrs. Bosworth and their home address is 238 Rampart boulevard, Los Angeles.

Marie Dressler is to reappear in the movies. She has signed a contract for a series of two-reel comedies to be made by a new company.

Mrs. Dressler's first appearance in the movies was several years ago with Charlie Chaplin in "Tillie's Punctured Romance." Later she impersonated the same household character in "Tillie's Toinette Surprise." Both these were suggested by her successful appearance in a staged farce called "Tillie's Nightmare."

Marie is not a child. She was born in Coburg, Canada, in 1871, and made her first appearance on the stage as Cigarette in "Under Two Flags."

During her forty years on the stage Dan Mason has never lost a day through illness. Dan's hobby has probably kept him in fine physical condition. He is a fisherman, one of those who sit in a boat all day and be satisfied with one wee bite.

Did you know that Mae Marsh's full name is Mary Warren Marsh?

Balboa has contributed nineteen men to Uncle Sam for his army.

"CINDERELLA GIRL" AT THE MYERS

Last night the Sherman Kelly players were seen in "My Cinderella Girl" at the Myers Theatre, and as usual gave a very interesting performance.

NOW WE ARE HAPPY

IM SO GLAD YOU WANTED TO BURN THE PHONOGRAPH, TOO!

PIANO BOXES

A house is a home.

Occasionally we should re-define things for ourselves like this.

Very often houses run people instead of people running houses. Then houses are homes. Home is not a matter of size or servants. Home is possible in a piano box.

Home is an atmosphere. No woman should let hardwood floors ruin her life. The minute they start, she should burn down her big, slick, polished, fancy home—and move into a piano box.

When the machinery of anything gets bigger than the thing—something is wrong.

A house is merely the machinery of home happiness.

If your automobile keeps you from seeing the country and makes you fret enough to poison your system to offset the good effects of the fresh air with which an automobile is supposed to fill you—run your automobile into a ditch and walk.

Let us re-define ourselves now and then WHY we are doing this and that, and WHY we have this and that. Let us continually re-define our wives, our husbands, our bosses, our ambitions, etc.

And, whenever, on mature thought we think it necessary, let burn down our cluttered mansions and move into a piano box.

The Daily Novelette

MRS. ZIBBITZ-ZIBBITZ.

Mrs. Gishway Zibbitz-Zibbitz, most active member of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the League of Tender Hearts, raised her hands in horror.

"Can that man actually be teasing that poor horse by pretending to offer her an apple and then not allowing her to have it?" she exclaimed with righteous and righteous indignation.

And, creeping up behind the brute, she threw her arms about his neck and screamed until four policemen came up and took him off to the station house, where the next morning he was sentenced to forty years of hard labor on suspicion of having attempted to rob a woman with whom he was not acquainted.

Meanwhile Mrs. Zibbitz-Zibbitz, continuing on her way, stepped into a fish store and roundly berated the proprietor for exposing live lobsters to the bright sunlight in his front window.

"spanked a little girl on a street corner for slapping at an innocent fly that had trustfully settled on her nose, and then returned home, where her five children, ranging in age from three years to five years and three months, were sitting on the front steps crying from hunger and exposure."

"How dare you give the neighbors the impression that you are improperly nourished?" cried Mrs. Zibbitz-Zibbitz, and whipped them all and sent them to bed without supper.

An hour later, when her husband came home, he found his wife gone to the movies and a nice cold meal of three sardines and a roll neatly set out for him on the kitchen table.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON
LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I keep thinking of these few lines of Shakespeare's:

"This above all to thine own self be true, and it must follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man."

(1) What do you think about them?
(2) Could some one be true to someone else and still not trust him?
(3) Do you think Shakespeare really believed that? And is it true?
I haven't had a very good education and I cannot explain just the way I feel, but the nearest I can come to what I want to ask is this:

(4) I am untrue myself in so many ways, and have never known that I thought was true in every way. All my life has been spent, it seems, in looking for someone that is good and true, so that I could learn from myself. Some I love and think are real good, much better than I am in a way, but still there are so many ways I do not trust them. Is it really possible to be true in all things? I am a person with good intentions but doubt all.

(1) Shakespeare's words are very true. You see, if you are a hypocritical and never lied, not even to yourself, you would necessarily be true to other people. Many of us are lying to ourselves all the time. We refuse to see unpleasant things about ourselves and try to make ourselves believe that they are not there. It is possible to be true to someone else and at the same time not trust him. But you will find that some of you are to yourself, the more faith you will have in others, and people who are trusted and believed in in most cases prove trustworthy.

(3) Shakespeare did believe what he said, because his words are so true.
(4) You have made a mistake in looking for someone to be true so that you could be true yourself. It would have been so much better to be true yourself and a light of truth and genuineness to others. It will probably help you to read Ralph Waldo Emerson's Essays. I think you will especially like "Self-Reliance" and "Compensation." It doesn't seem to be possible to be human and at the same time true in all things. But truthfulness is worth striving for certainly. Some people are very truthful. Their integrity is so marked that you would trust them in anything.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl twenty years old and have been going with a young man my own age. He is not old enough to be drafted, as all my other friends are, but he wants very much to join the army and run. I have tried to discourage him from doing this, but he still wants to. It seems to me that that work is so dangerous and I hate to have him go. Don't you think he ought to go into some of the other branches of military training if he must go to war?

The way airships and airplanes are built nowadays there is probably not much more danger in that line of service than in any other. The young man ought to be commended for his patriotism, and I would be proud of his friendship if I were you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) If you are out with a young man and he insults you, should you leave him at once? If not, what should you do?
(2) How can I reduce my hips?

(1) Yes, it is best to leave him at once. If you are sure he meant an insult, you should not remain with him. But if you are not sure, but if not, ask him to apologize.
(2) Rolling exercises are good for reducing the hips.

watching the storm, each busy with his own thoughts. Eleanor was trembling happy. "If Douglas could get this position with its increased pay his burden would be lightened that he would get a chance to regain his strength," she thought. "The doctor said half the battle lay in freedom from worry."
Douglas was thinking. "If I can get this position, the dearest woman to herself, 'Dear children, they have in the world can have a little easier time. God knows that would make me happier than any position on earth.' While good Aunt Laura was saying to herself, 'Dear children, they have each other; what can anything else matter.'"

The hired man came up to the kitchen for the milk pails, and Eleanor started up, saying: "I will go and help Cousin Mary with the supper."

OUT OF THE WAR GARDEN.
Use strained onions in meat loaf or serve them in butter or cream sauce.

After preparing string beans for the table, set them in the oven and bake a short time. It improves the flavor.

An excellent salad is made of cooked string beans, chives, cucumbers, parsley, celery and sorrel, mixed with French dressing of oil and vinegar, or lemon juice.

Pusley—If you are so fortunate as to have a garden—commonly called pusley—growing in your garden, save it. It makes fine greens on salad. Is good canned for winter use.

Cream or Onion Soup—Boil one pint of sliced onions in water, drain, add one pint of boiling water and one quart of milk scalded with a bit of bay leaf, then thicken with one-fourth cup of flour rubbed to a smooth paste with an equal quantity of butter. Season with pepper and salt and cook ten minutes before serving. Do not strain.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

(Miss Hoyt will answer in this paper all questions on matters of etiquette addressed to her in care of this paper, if a personal answer is desired enclose a two-cent stamp.)

A mother often announces her daughter's engagement, and to the girl's most intimate friends it may be done at a luncheon given for the purpose.

RUTH: The young man had no occasion for anger when you told him that he must go home. If he was so ill-bred as to stay until an unreasonable hour, he deserved to be requested to leave, and he should have apologized for his remissness. A self-respecting young woman sometimes is obliged to resort to such means in order to comply with propriety. A gentleman would see to it that he took his leave at a proper hour. Others need no consideration.

THILLYN: When you introduce two people, whatever the circumstances speak the name of the lady before that of the gentleman; that of the older or more important woman before that of the younger or less important. Do not introduce people on the street if you can avoid it.

OTHER PEOPLE'S BUSINESSES.

What a lot we all know about other people's businesses. Especially about the profits.

The other day I heard two men discussing a third man's profits on a trucking job.

Said the first, "I'm afraid he'll not make much money on it."

Said the second, "Why he's going to get forty dollars and it will only take him three days. Over twelve dollars a day. I call that pretty good money."

What about Gasoline and Oil?
Said the first, "What about gasoline and oil? And how about interest on the money invested in the truck?"

And depreciation upon those things do mount up," conceded the second man.

And yet, left to himself he would have reckoned "twelve dollars a day" good pay.

And the queerest thing about that is that he is a business man, in business for himself.

Those Terrible Dentist Bills.
The dentist is another person whose profits are very common. I know he gets so much an hour for his time and they multiply that by the number of hours in the day (forgetting that there must be waits) and that by the number of days in the year (forgetting dull seasons) and

HEALTH TALKS

THE RELIEF OF MUSCULAR RHEUMATISM

Recently the nature and most frequent seats of so-called muscular rheumatism were pointed out. Its cause was specified—focal infection. Bacteria harbored in the tonsils, adenoids, in some distant part of the body, acquire a selective affinity for tendon-sheath or fascia, and in time manage to invade such tissue and cause "muscular rheumatism." It is as readily conceived how a strain of bacteria may have an affinity for tendon-sheath or fascia as to think of the lockjaw bacillus having an affinity for nerve tissue. Microbes, like certain higher forms of plants, have their affinities. The septic focus when comes the germ that puts the profanity in muscular rheumatism is several. Among these sources are diseased tonsils, infected accessory sinuses in the nose, roof abscesses, pus pockets in the gums. Don't let your muscular rheumatism run on into chronicity. Find the focus. It is a first class job for a good all-around family doctor.

The first essential in treatment is complete rest of the affected muscles—bed, chair, or crutches. Find the focus. It is a first class job for a good all-around family doctor. The local application of heat is always effective. There is one of the few places where a tremendous extra-large "hospital size" poultice does real good. A poultice, by the way, doesn't deserve the name unless it is at least a pound of material goes into it. These trial or ten-cent size poultices, one often encounters are a very cruel joke on the victim. The sole purpose of poulticing is to apply heat and moisture in order to relax and relieve pain.

Thick cotton padding, with splints, combines warmth and rest and support.

Hot air baking, in apparatus appropriate for the purpose, is one of the best remedies.

After several days of rest, massage should be gradually resumed, by one who knows how to massage.

As soon as pain will permit, mild passive movements should be made, followed by active exercises. All of these measures are merely palliative. Meanwhile the septic focus is traced out and eradicated. If a vaccine can be prepared from the bacteria present in the focus, its administration in conjunction with the local measures mentioned, will add much to the probability and promptness of recovery.

The internal use of various coal-tar derivatives, such as salicylate acid, sodium salicylate, aspirin, acetanilide, may be justifiable to relieve pain, but involve too much risk of heart depression for the patient to take without medical supervision.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

The Vulgarities of Sweat.
Kindly inform me whether it is injurious to the health to use a lot of perfume to prevent respiration of armpits or of the face? It is so vulgar to perspire, yet I suffer much from this condition in the warm season, if I am at all active.

Answer—No, there is no objection to such lotions, provided they do not irritate or inflame the skin. The idea that sweating with exertion in warm weather is vulgar probably came over on the Mayflower with sundry other imports. It wasn't born in America, at any rate.

Sweet Milk versus the Leavings.
Please tell me which is more wholesome, sweet milk or buttermilk? Is sweet milk bilious or constipating? Do you get as much good from skimmed sweet milk as from buttermilk? (Mrs. M.) P. S.—I weigh 110 and want to gain 15 pounds.

Answer—Both are wholesome. Milk is not constipating, but one on a milk diet has less frequent evacuations because the milk leaves but little undigested residue. Skimmed milk and buttermilk are about equally nutritious. If you wish to gain weight better use fresh sweet milk.

Bricklaying a Healthy Trade.

I was born in Ireland in 1892, and came to this country a few years ago. Two good doctors there advised me to come here for my asthma, because it rains a good deal over there. They told me I should do no work. But a relative who is a contractor offers me a good job at my trade of bricklayer. Would it be unhealthy for me to go to work now that I am so much better?

Answer—No, bricklaying is healthy work, so long as you refrain from using the bricks to express your opinions on the boss.

GRAPEFRUIT SHERBET

Two cups juice pressed from grapefruit oranges can be used instead of grapefruit. One cup pineapple juice, two cups sugar, juice of one lemon, two cups water, two stiffly beaten egg whites.

Roll sugar and water to a thin syrup, cool and add fruit juices; then add egg whites and place in freezer. The above recipe will make almost one gallon of sherbet.

The Business of Living

A Letter From Mr. Barney Fills Eleanor With Happiness and Hope.

"Here's the letter," Eleanor ran up the driveway holding the white envelope in front of her in spite of the rain that had begun to fall.

"Hurry, dear, you will get wet," called Douglas from the porch.

"It feels good," she held her head back and let the rain fall on her upturned face. "But I will hurry for I want to know what is in the letter."

She added, beginning to run as the shower increased in violence.

Douglas took the letter from her hand, and opened it while she was shaking the rain from her skirt.

"Read it," he said. "Read it, Barney," she rested her arms on his chair and read over his shoulder.

"What did I tell you?" she exclaimed joyously, seizing his face and turning it up to be kissed. She gave his chin a pinch and ran around to seat herself on the arm of his chair, her favorite position. Douglas supported his arm around her.

"Remember this is not conclusive. Mr. Barney is very polite and—"

"Why, he says he is very glad to know about you and that he has telephoned to the firm you worked for and is pleased with their report and"

Douglas put the excited little hand and said: "He simply says he will consider my application."

"You old croaker," she playfully pinched her husband's ear. "Of course when he sees you everything will be all right."

"Unfortunately everyone does not see me through your glasses," Douglas had no time to finish his remarks, for Aunt Laura came onto the porch at this juncture. Eleanor sprang up and ran to her, exclaiming: "Douglas has a letter from Mr. Barney and it is going to be all right about the position. I am sure of it. He says"

"Read it, Auntie, and judge for yourself. Eleanor is taking too much for granted. I do not want her to be disappointed."—Douglas handed over the letter.

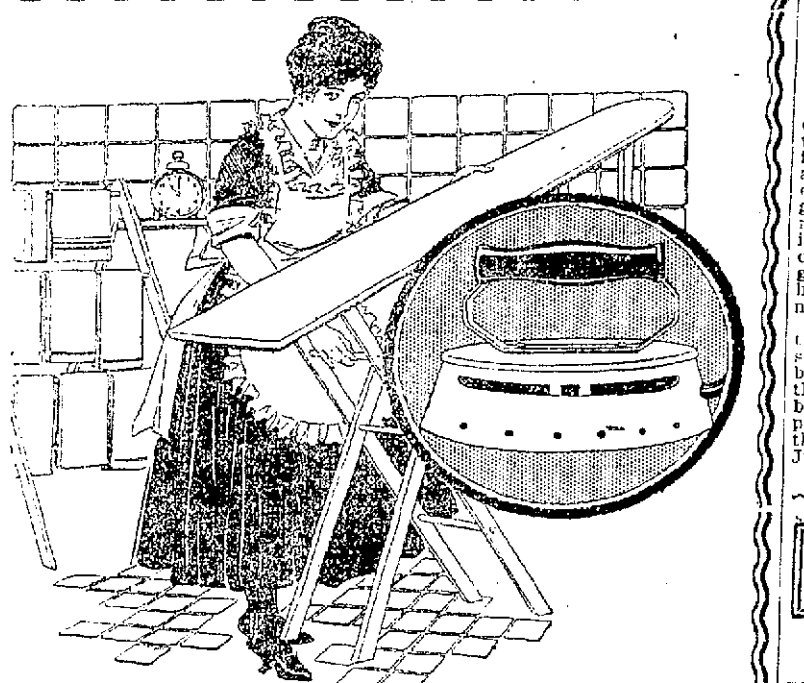

"It certainly is very encouraging. I for one believe you will land the position all right, but as you say it is not sure yet. Let's take it for just what it says. It is a fine prospect and I am mighty glad." She extended her hand to shake that of her nephew, then laid an affectionate hand on Eleanor's shoulder.

"That will mean more pay," began Eleanor with shining eyes.

"Don't lay yourself open to disappointment. Just calmly expect the good position to come to Douglas, but do not build too much on it."

"That is distinction without difference. I am expecting the position, but I can be happy without it. If it is not to be," Eleanor's eyes shone with happy excitement.

"The storm had increased in violence and their voices were almost drowned in the downpour. The waterspouts overflowed and sent the wind in a big cataract onto the ground at the end of the porch while the air was full of the rumble of distant thunder. They sat in silence

Dinner Stories

There was some speculation as to whether the instrument would be in the old gentleman or not. One was holding the car trumpet while explaining its use and showing old Mr. Shortcask how to hold it to his ear.

"Say something to him through it, Bink," said one of the others.

Now Bink had long waited for an opportunity to reach Mr. Shortcask's ear, so, speaking very distinctly into the trumpet, he said: "You've not paid me that $5 you owe me yet, Mr. Shortcask."

But the old gentleman put the instrument down with disappointment on his face, and they could see it was a failure, even before he had time to say:

"That thing's not a bit of use to me."

And he sighed, but his sigh was not as deep as that which came from Bink.

A distinguished philanthropist, traveling through the south, became interested in the case of a cheerful, hearted old colored woman who, it was claimed, had been the adopted mother of twenty-five children.

"What a fine old lady," the philanthropist, "has any of your adopted children ever done anything for you?"

"Naw, sah," she replied, "none 'cep'tin' de one what chole me."

"I want to be procrastinated at de next corner," said Mr. Erasmus Bink.

"You want to be what?" demanded the philanthropist.

"Don't lose your temper, I had to look in de dictionary myself before I found out 'procrastinate' means 'put off'."

TODAY'S BEAUTY TALK

You can enjoy a delightful shampoo with very little effort and for a very trifling cost, if you get from your druggist a package of cantilox and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. Your shampoo is now ready. Just pour a little at a time on the scalp and hair and back are entirely covered by the daintily perfumed preparation that thoroughly dissolves and removes every bit of dandruff, excess oil and dirt. After rinsing, the hair dries quickly, with a fluidness that makes it seem heavier than it is, and takes on a rich luster and a softness that makes arranging it a pleasure.

PIMPLES

Why so many young men and especially other wise beautiful women allow their faces to be disfigured with unsightly pimples is beyond me, says Peterson.

Every druggist in America who cares to speak freely will tell you that one 25c box of Peterson's Ointment is guaranteed to banish every pimple or other skin eruption, or money back—and it won't take more than 10 days to do it.

The mighty healing power of Peterson's Ointment in skin diseases, Eczema, Salt Rheum, Sore Nipples, Old Sores, Ulcers, blind, bleeding and itching piles, is almost beyond belief and the small price puts it within reach of all.

Dr. W. Burg of Erie, Pa., writes: "I had suffered with Eczema of the left ear and scalp for over 25 years, but a small box of Peterson's Ointment has entirely eradicated it." All druggists are authorized to guarantee it. Advertisement.

The Real Man

"Kintzie," the suspicious old banker that I've been telling you about, is determined to run me down," he said, changing the subject abruptly. "I've got it pretty straight that he is planning to send one of his clerks to the Topaz district to try and find your father, in the hope that he will tell what he knows about me."

"Does this Mr. Kinzie know where father is to be found?"

"He doesn't, that's the only hitch."

"Miss Vreda's smile across the little table was level-eyed."

"I could be lots of help to you, Montague, in this fight you are making, if you only let me," she suggested.

"I'll fight for my own hand," was the grating rejoinder. "I can assure you, Kintzie's messenger will never reach your father—alive."

"Ooh!" shuddered the beauty, with a little lift of the rounded shoulders. "How utterly and hopelessly primitive! Let me show you a much simpler alternative. I have a map of the mining district, you know. Father left it with me—in case I should want to communicate with him."

Smith looked up with a smile which was a mere baring of the teeth.

"You wouldn't get in a man's way with any fine-spun theories of the ultimate right and wrong, would you? You wouldn't say that the only great man is the man who loves his fellow men, and all that?"

Again the handsome shoulders were lifted, this time in cool scorn.

"Are you quoting the little ranch person?" she inquired. Then she answered his query: "The only great men worth speaking of are the men who win. For the lack of something better to do, I'm willing to help you win, Montague. Most naturally, I am the one who would know where my father is to be found. And I have changed my mind about wanting to drive to the Baldwin's. We'll compromise on the play—there is a play."

"There is a play, and I have the seats," he announced briefly.

"Merel!" she flung back. "Small favors thankfully received, and large ones in proportion; though it's hardly a favor, this time, because I have paid for it in advance. Mr. Kinzie's young man came to see me this morning."

"What did you do?"

"I gave him a tracing of my map, and he was so grateful it made me want to tell him that it was all wrong; that he wouldn't find father in a month if he followed the directions."

"But you didn't!"

"No; I can play the game, when it seems worth while."

Smith was frowning thoughtfully when he led her to the elevator alcove.

"My way would have been the surer," he muttered, half to himself.

"Barbarian!" she laughed; and then: "To think that you were once a 'debutante' darling! Oh, yes; I know it was Carter Westfall who said it first, but it was true enough to name you instantly for all Lawrenceville."

CHAPTER XVII.

The Megalomania.

Sixty-four hours before the expiration of the time limit, Bartley Williams, lean and somber-eyed from the strain he had been under for many days and nights, saw the president's gray roadster plowing its way through the mesa sand on the approach to the construction camp, and was glad.

"I've been trying all the morning to squeeze out time to get to town," he told Baldwin, when the roadster came to a stand in front of the shack commissary. "Where is Smith?"

"The colonel threw up his hand in a gesture expressive of complete detachment."

"Don't ask me. John has gone plumb loco in these last two or three days. It's as much as your life's worth to ask him where he has been or where he is going or what he means to do next."

"He hasn't stopped fighting?" said the engineer, half agitated at the bare possibility.

"Oh, no; he is at it harder than ever—going it just a shaving too strong, is what I'd tell him, if he let me get near enough to shout at him."

Last night, after the theater, he went around to the Herald office, and the way they're talking it on the street, he was aiming to shoot up the whole newspaper joint if Mark Allen, the editor, wouldn't take back a bunch of the lies he's been publishing about the High Line. It wound up in a scrap of some sort. I don't know who got the worst of it, but John isn't crippled up any, to speak of, this morning—only in his temper."

Williams shook his head. "I guess we'll have to stand for the grouch, if he'll only keep busy. He has the hot end of it. We couldn't very well get along without him, right now, colonel. With all due respect to you and the members of the board, he is the fighting backbone of the whole outfit."

"He is that," was Baldwin's ready admission. "He is just what we've been calling him from the first, Bartley—a three-ply, dyed-in-the-wool wonder in his specialty. He is fighting now like a man in the last ditch, and I believe he thinks he is in the last ditch."

"It will be only two days more," said the engineer, saying it as one who has been counting the days in keen anxiety. And then: "Stillings told me yesterday that we're not going to get an extension of the time limit from the state authorities."

"No; that little fire went out, blink, just as Smith said it would. Stanton's backers have the political pull—in the state as well as in Washington. They're going to hold us to the letter of the law."

"Let 'em do it. We'll win out yet—if we don't run up against one or both of the only two things I'm afraid of now: high water, or the railroad call-down."

"The railroad grab? Have you heard anything more about that?"

"That is what I was trying to get to town for; to talk the railroad business over with you and Stillings and Smith. They've had a gang here this morning—a bunch of engineers, with a stranger, who gave his name as Hallowell, in charge. They claimed to be verifying the old survey, and Hallowell notified me formally that our dam stood squarely in their right of way for a bridge crossing of the river."

"They didn't serve any papers on you, did they?" inquired the colonel anxiously.

"No; the notice was verbal. But Hallowell wound up with a threat. He said, 'You've had due warning, legally and otherwise, Mr. Williams. This is our right of way, bought and paid for, as we can prove when the matter gets into the courts. You mustn't be surprised if we take whatever steps may be necessary to recover what belongs to us.'"

"Force?" queried the Missourian, with a glint of the border fighter's fire in his eyes.

"Maybe. But we're ready for that. Did you know that Smith loaded half a dozen cases of new rifles on a motor truck yesterday, and had them sent out here?"

"No?"

"He did—and told me to say nothing about it. It seems that he ordered them some time ago from an arms agency in Denver. That fellow foresees everything, colonel."

Dexter Baldwin had climbed into his car and was making ready to turn it for the run back to town.

"If I were you, Bartley, I believe I'd open up those gun boxes and pass the word among as many of the men as you think you can trust with rifles in their hands. I'll tell Smith—and Bob Stillings."

Colonel Baldwin saw the company's attorney, as soon as he reached Brewster. But Smith was not in his office, and no one seemed to know where he had gone. The colonel shrewdly suspected that Miss Richlander was making another draft upon the secretary's time, and he said as much to Starbuck, later in the day, when the mine owner sauntered into the High Line headquarters and proceeded to roll the inevitable cigarette.

"Not any this time, colonel," was Starbuck's rebuttal. "You've missed it by a whole row of apple trees. Miss Rich-dollars is over at the hotel. I saw her at luncheon with the Stanton's less than an hour ago."

"You haven't seen Smith, have you?"

"No; but I know where he is. He's out in the country, somewhere, taking the air in Dick Maxwell's runabout. I wanted to borrow the wagon myself, and Dick told me he had already lent it to Smith."

"We're needing him," said the colonel shortly, and then he told Starbuck of the newest development in the paper-railroad scheme of obstruction.

From that the talk drifted to a discussion of Kintzie's latest attitude. By this time there had been an alarming number of stock sales by small holders, all of them handled by the Brewster City National, and it was plainly evident that Kintzie had finally gone over to the enemy and was buying—as cheaply as possible—for some unpaired customer.

"If they keep it up, they can wear us out by little, and we'll break our necks finishing the dam and saving the franchise only to turn it over to them in the round-up," said the colonel dejectedly. "I've talked until I'm hoarse, but you can't talk marrow into an empty bone, Billy. I used to think we had a fairly good bunch of men in with us, but in these last few days I've been changing my mind at a trot."

The remainder of the day, up to the time when the offices were closing and the colonel was making ready to go home, passed without incident. In Smith's continued absence Starbuck had offered to go to the dam to stand a night watch with Williams against a possible surprise by the right-of-way claimants; and Stillings, who had been petitioning for an injunction, came up to report progress just as Baldwin was locking his desk.

"The judge has taken it under advisement, but that is as far as he would go today," said the lawyer. "It's simply a bold stunt, of course, I'm sworn to uphold the law, and I can't counsel armed resistance. Just the same, I hope Williams has his nerve with him."

"He has; and I haven't lost mine yet," snapped a voice at the door; and Smith came in, dust-covered and swarthy with the grime of the wind-swept grasslands. Out of the pocket of his driving coat he drew a thick packet of papers and slapped it upon the drawn-down curtain of Baldwin's desk.

"There you are," he went on gratingly. "Now you can tell Mr. David Kintzie to go straight to blazes with his stock-punching, and the more money he puts into it, the more somebody's going to lose."

"John!—what have you done?" demanded Baldwin.

"I've shown 'em what it means to go up against a winner!" was the half-triumphant, half-savage exclamation. "I have put a crimp in that fence-climbing bunch of yours that will last him for one while! I've secured thirty-day options, at par, on enough High Line stock to swing a clear majority if Kintzie should buy up every other share there is outstanding. It has taken me all day, and I've driven a thousand miles, but the thing is done."

"But, John! If anything should happen, and we'd have to make good on those options, . . . It would break the last man of us!"

"We're not going to let things happen," was the grating rejoinder. "I've told you both a dozen times that I'm in this thing to win! You take care of those options, Stillings; they're worth a million dollars to somebody. Lock 'em up somewhere and then forger where they are. Now I'm going to hunt up Mr. Crawford Stanton—before I eat or sleep!"

"Easy, John; hold up a minute!" the colonel broke in soothingly; and Stillings, more practical, closed the office door silently and put his back against it. "There is a pretty sudden country, but there is some sort of a limit, you know," the big Missourian went on. "What's your idea in going to Stanton?"

"I mean to give him twelve hours in which to pack his trunk and get out of Brewster and the Timanyon. If he hasn't disappeared by tomorrow morning—"

Stillings was signaling in dumb show to Baldwin. He had quietly fingered and making signs over his shoulder toward the corridor. Baldwin saw what was wanted, and immediately shot his desk cover open and turned on the lights.

NEW SOLDIERLY QUALITIES

(Preceding Lessons: 1. Your Post of Honor; 2. Making Good as a Soldier.)

The three basic qualities, Loyalty, Obedience and Physical Fitness, were treated in the preceding lessons. There are three other qualities, three soldierly qualities that are especially needed during the periods of training, marching and waiting between combats. They are:

Intelligence, Cleanliness, Cheerfulness.

Although these qualities are associated chiefly with camp life, they are, of course, scarcely less helpful in all other phases of military service.

Intelligence. It is not necessarily mean education, but rather quick observation and willingness to learn. There is plenty of need for intelligence in modern warfare. The national army will be forced to absorb within a few months a training which would ordinarily extend over a period of two or three years. Those who intend to fit themselves for promotion should study hard and learn the drill regulations which affect their duties. In time they should learn something about map-making and map-reading, the construction of field entrenchments, the use of signals and messages, signalling, the handling of complex pieces of machinery, and many other subjects.

Any practical knowledge that you can pick up will surely be useful and helpful to you in the army. Captain Hay Belth of the English army points out that in the first British forces of the present war the previous trade or training of every soldier was sooner or later utilized.

Cleanliness. Cleanliness is important everywhere, but of all in the army where large bodies of men are crowded together in its true sense, it includes not only keeping your bodies clean, but also your mind and your quarters. Fortunately, the virtues in which Americans generally rank high. There should be little difficulty in getting a satisfactory standard in the new army. This is a subject more fully treated later in this course.

Cheerfulness. Cheerfulness is always a prominent trait of good soldiers. Here again Americans may be counted upon to make a splendid showing, even in the face of any unexpected hardships or difficulties that may be ahead of us. There are numerous episodes in American military history to justify this confidence.

In January, 1863, the Union army lay in camp at Falmouth, Va. About a month before had occurred the disastrous and bloody defeat of Fredericksburg. In the north it was the darkest hour of the war. Everywhere outside the army there was depression and fear. On Jan. 21 the commanding general ordered the troops to break camp and move forward at the same time "a cold drizzling rain set in; the ground speedily became like a sea of glue; everything upon wheels sank into the bottomless mud; it took twenty horses to start out a single caisson; hundreds of them died in harness; but still the general persisted. But the rain persisted also, and it soon became a simple impossibility to go forward." After two days of effort it was necessary to have the men struggle and flounder "through the wilderness of mud back to their camp."

Picture the situation: Recent defeat with heavy losses; retreat; a cheerless midwinter camp; rain; cold; mud; discouragement at home; a long march under the most trying conditions ending in a return to the same camping grounds from which the troops had started. A little grumbling might reasonably have been expected. But the men of 1863 were too good soldiers to draw long faces.

The historian goes on: "The march was not a high good humor, the soldiers laughing and joking at their ill luck with that comic brightness characteristic of Americans in difficult circumstances."

Three Qualities of Battle.

Finally, there are the three battle qualities of the good soldier:

Spirit.

Self-reliance.

Spirit—fighting spirit—is far from being mere hatred of the enemy or blind fury, on the one hand; nor is it mere

PARIS, A SEAPORT
FOLLOWING STRIFE

Paris, Aug. 16.—Paris as one of the world's greatest seaports of the future is today more than idle chatter. Ever since the seventeenth century the idea of a seaport Paris has been occasionally discussed by learned Frenchmen and approved as highly desirable. But it was the big war developed the plan so that today it is a potent possibility. The war has demanded the absolute necessity of providing Paris with a navigable waterway direct to the sea, so that ocean going ships might bring their cargoes into dock at the French metropolis.

The "Paris seaport" scheme has been handed down from generation to generation, with additions and modifications on paper. Then came the great floods of 1910 when whole quarters of Paris were inundated and traffic was suspended for days. It was then definitely decided that a canal system must be built to relieve the main stream in case of new floods, and the idea of widening and deepening the Seine was also considered.

Today the prefect of the Seine has issued circulars to the municipal authorities, outlining a definite and new scheme for rendering the Seine a navigable waterway for shipping from Paris to Rouen and proposing that a port be built at Gennevilliers, outside of Paris, with easy access to the capital.
